Experience of an Indianapolis Woman Who Saw a Rich Gown at the Chicago Opera.

A number of Indianapolis ladies have been to Chicago to hear the opera. One of them tells the story of a little experience was so interested in the audience. We were Mrs. Potter Palmer, the McCormicks and A man just in front of me said: 'If I don't see that $50,000 dress 1 know I shall catch ance of costing so much money. Finally we side, whom I had never seen before, dress.' He had evidently overon diamonds by the bushel, in a tiara, a necklace, in pins and bracelets, but the money in the jewels was not included in the inventory of the gown, I was told."

A young lady suddenly seized with a deher calling list, which she had had for some time, and wrote her addresses from that, She invited only unmarried friends. In her parents' home. What was her surthere was another young lady on the same daughter had before she was married. The

"If I were a lady who tried to put on style and lived in a pretty house and had fine furniture I would be ashamed to have as soiled servants answer the bell to my callers as answer the door when I call on them," said a pretty young housewife. "I went to Mrs. V.'s to call a few days ago and everyone knows that she puts on more style and talks about when she was in Europe and speaks about 'my maid' as if she had a personal attendant. The 'maid' who opened the door was the dirtiest being I ever saw in a clean woman's house. She was unkempt from top to toe, not a respectable article of dress on her, and as for her hair and hands and neck, the less said the better. And it was not only at Mrs. V.'s, but at several places, the maid who came to the door was not neat."

A lady who gave a reception recently scribed by Alexander Downing. complained that her candlesticks, which had been loaned to a friend for a similar occasion, had not been returned. "I have candlesticks," she remarked, "but no one will ever know they are mine, for now that I want them, they are not here. All my friends get the credit of owning my pretty candlesticks.

There is a great craze here for the Boston bags. Few women have a dress pocket and as they are sure to have something to carry, fashion has revived the old bag, These and the satin ribbon pockets are in style to stay. A young lady who went to with ribbons, found that some one had slipped up to her and cut the ribbons and stolen her pocketbook. The next bag she Colonel and Mrs. Woodward and Colonel made she had a chain put on instead of the

The following definition has been given of a popular girl: "The really popular girl of to-day knows a lot; particularly not to gossip about friends who have favored her, and those who are able to show her favors. In John L. Griffiths, Miss Mary Rariden, Mrs. H. G. Carey, Mrs. Charles W. Fairbanks and Mrs. John Coburn. She knows enough to dress appropriately at | A party of young ladies, consisting of knows how to dance, swim, row, sail a boat, play the piano and banjo, sing negro melodies and college songs. She knows tle confidences the boys give her when in the blues or feeling particularly good, and she knows how to cook when they are stranded on an island, becalmed and withhome. She knows just how to catch a fish and then to cook it, and she knows enough not to growl and whine and complain until they are safely home."

A Kansas City paper comments on the bright wit of a young hostess who was to give a ladies' luncheon and atoned for the decorted with drawings of men. As far as possible the designs were after the particular fancy of each guest, with some mark to signify it by his profession or some peculiarity. This scheme has been practiced in Indianapolis several times and created no

Good breeding is but another name for kindly forethought and consideration for others, and is the cardinal principle of etiquette. Common sense alone should teach that an invitation to any entertainment where the absence of one or several guests would inconvenience the stess or cause alterations in her plans requires a prompt and explicit acceptance or regret. Among such functions are dinpers, luncheons, wedding breakfasts, dancing parties and card parties.

Yesterday was visitors' day at the Katherine Merrill Club and there was a large assemblage of members and guests. The paper of the afternoon was "The Revival of Provencal Poetry," by Miss Evaleen Stein, of Lafayette. Miss Stein took her audience back to the time of the troubadours of southern France, who used the Provencal language, which was a polished and finished tongue at that time. The language was afterward excommunicated by the Pope and was not allowed to be used by scholars. The revival has been to reand the one man who has been largely instrumental in the revival is Frederick Mistreal. Miss Stein recited a few of his verses from "Mitrieo" to illustrate the style conversation.

A Tribute.

Kansas City Journal.

The rich are targets for unkind and often unjust criticism. Because a wealthy man has not given away all his possessions he is looked upon as a mnty creature, devoid a gross error. Take, for instance, Uncle Russell Sage. There is a prevalent notion ings with his fellow-men. The fact that h wears $9 suits of clothes and $2 shoes, and appears indifferent as to whether the rest of mankind wears any at all, has gained Uncle Russ quite a reputation for frugality. But while to the world at large Mr. Sagehe has saved gallons of ink by not having a longer name-may have seemed cold and hard, he has not been so to the extent supposed. He has his soft and warm side. For example, when his brother, who is, unfortunately, poor and hard up, applied to him a few days ago for a loan, did Uncle Russ give him the marble heart? No, indeed, He omptly accommodated him to the amoun of $50, and took a mortgage on his home for the same. Some may think the mortgage in this case is an evidence of lack of fraternal affection, but it is only proof or methodical habits. In all probability, when the time is up, if the money is not returned with interest, Uncle Russ will give a few days of grace before foreclosing. It is thus
